Designing and Developing Online Course Assessment Session 2

Time: 12:00-1:30

Date: June 24, 2009

Wilhelmina Fitzgerald Delco Bldg

Rm.217

Join us and learn how to design and develop assessment tools in online instructional environments. The goal of this webcast is to learn how to design assessments aligned with a learner-centered instructional framework which considers both content and the skills used in the process of learning.

Who Should Attend:

Instructional designers, faculty developers, and instructors who design and teach online courses or blended courses with online assessments will leave this webcast with the ability to:

- Identify components of assessments that are learner-centered
- Design rubrics and assessments that accurately measure student achievement and learning
